Transnational Social Review

A Social Work Journal

Transnational Social Review – A Social Work Journal (TSR) offers a transdisciplinary and international space to discuss topics relevant to social work from a transnational perspective. It responds to the challenges of the increasing impact of transnational developments and structures upon social work.

TSR is a path-breaking journal that aims at the transnational opening and development of social work and related fields. Its main objective is to open perspectives for making the concept of transnationality part of their knowledge structure and practice, in order to extend and transform concepts, research, and methods which to date often still are trapped within a national framework.

TSR follows a wide understanding of social work and welcomes a dialogue with other disciplines, varied theoretical perspectives and methodological approaches.

TSR is a peer reviewed journal, published three times a year. Each issue consists of a cluster of articles on a focus topic as well as general articles which are not thematically linked. Additionally, it includes book reviews and the section “Mapping Transnationalism”, which consists of brief, up-to-date reports on research, teaching, social policies, and practices concerning the transnational worlds of social work.

TSR aims at a wide audience, including academics, practitioners and politicians. It is available online as well as in print.

TSR was founded in 2010 by an international team of editors and board members. From 2014, TSR is published by Routledge, Taylor & Francis Group.
